About WWCGS

Founded in 1976, the Western Wayne County Genealogical Society is a non-profit organization. WWCGS is governed by a Board of Directors and comprised of officers serving up to three consecutive one year terms with elections held annually in May. WWCGS functions through the volunteer efforts of its members. The society explores various methods of tracing ancestry and promotes education both for beginners and more experienced genealogists through speakers, workshops, and seminars, addressing topics of interest. The society also records and publishes material of interest to genealogists.

The society is a member of the National Genealogical Society (NGS), founded in 1903. In addition, the Society is also affiliated with the Michigan Genealogical Council (MGS), a non-profit organization founded in 1972, with over 175 member societies in Michigan, representing more than 7,800 individual genealogists.

In addition to offering instruction to assist the family historian, the goals of the Society are to promote the gathering and exchange of methods and techniques for pursuing family histories and preserving public records of importance to genealogists. Any person who is interested in pursuing their family history is welcome to join the Society or to attend meetings as a visitor. Members are encouraged to participate in the many activities sponsored by the Society.
